EL FARO CONDITIONS PROBED IN FINAL HEARING

1 The U.S. investigation into the deadly sinking of a cargo ship during a 2015 hurricane entered its final hearing on Monday, with ship conditions probed at the start of two weeks of testimony set to examine new detail on El Faro's last hours. The Coast Guard's Marine Board of Investigation, convened only for the most serious accidents, is looking for evidence of negligence or misconduct in the worst disaster involving a U.S.-flagged vessel in more than three decades. All 33 crew onboard died when the 790-foot El Faro sank during a hurricane on Oct. 1, 2015, two days after leaving Jacksonville, Florida, on a cargo run to Puerto Rico. REUTERS

MAFIA INFORMANT LOSES LAWSUIT AGAINST FBI

2 A former mafia informant for the FBI who sued his handlers for arresting him in a murder case lost his case after a New York judge ruled there was not enough evidence that the agents had conspired to punish him by falsely charging him. Joseph Barone had sued over his 2009 arrest on what his lawsuit described as "trumped-up charges that he had participated in a murder-for-hire plot," in a case that offers a glimpse at the sometimes conflicted relationship between informants and their government handlers. A federal jury acquitted him in 2010 after he had spent 19 months in prison, much of it in solitary confinement. Barone, now 55, accused his handlers at the FBI of wanting to punish him for refusing an assignment to trick a gangster from the Gambino crime family into discussing criminal activity over the telephone. REUTERS

US SHOULD EXPAND MISSILE DEFENSE

3 The United States should expand its missile defense systems given missile testing by North Korea and Iran, the chairman of the U.S. House of Representatives Armed Services Committee said on Monday. The comments by Republican Representative Mac Thornberry followed new U.S. sanctions against Iran after the Persian country's recent ballistic missile test. The United States is also concerned

North Korea may be preparing to test a new ballistic missile. Thornberry's position was a sign of support in Congress for military spending to counter the threat from North Korea after U.S. President Donald Trump on the presidential campaign trail raised doubts about future spending to defend allies. REUTERS

METEOR LIGHTS UP NIGHT SKY OVER MIDWEST

4 A meteor plummeted in a fireball over Lake Michigan early on Monday, lighting up the night sky in bright blue just before scattering over the lake in many pieces, according to a police video and an expert's description. Lisle, Illinois, police officer Jim Dexter recorded the meteor's descent on the dash camera of his patrol car at 1:25 a.m. Aside from Lisle, which is less than 30 miles east of Chicago, and other parts of Illinois; witnesses reported seeing the meteor from Wisconsin, Michigan and as far away as New York state and the Canadian province of Ontario, according to a description on the website of the American Meteor Society. The meteor's fiery descent is likely to rank as one of the most spectacular events of its kind anywhere in the world this year, Mike Hankey, operations manager for the society, said by phone. REUTERS

WELCOME TO METRO.US!

KATE MOONEY FEATURES EDITOR

The polarizing talker of an HBO series about millennials in Brooklyn—yep, we're talking about "Girls"—kicks off its sixth and final season Sunday, Feb. 12. We spoke with actor Alex Karpovsky, who plays Ray Ploshansky, the moral center of sorts in a show of narcissists. "As I understood it, we never wanted to make a show about mature, balanced, healthy people," Karpovsky says.

'Conflicted' Patriots fans donate to civil liberties group as protest against Trump

Fans pledged thousands of dollars to the ACLU and Planned Parenthood to offset Trump's stated admiration for the team.

@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

For some New England Patriots fans, rooting for their favorite team this season has come with some complications.

Just because they believe Tom Brady is the G.O.A.T. — and he showed it in Sunday's Super Bowl victory — doesn't necessarily mean those same fans approve of his friendship with President Donald Trump. It also doesn't mean they want to be associated with other Patriots supporters whose political views they do not share.

So to ensure their cheers came with a clear conscience, Pats fans donated thousands of dollars to service organizations like the ACLU, Planned Parenthood and the Center for American Islamic Relations for every touchdown or individual point the Patriots scored.

So far, fans have contributed more than $20,000 to good causes.

Emma Sandoe, a doctoral student at Harvard, is one of those ambivalent fans.

Ahead of Super Bowl LI, she and her friend Josh Gondelman, a Bay State-born comedian and writer for the HBO comedy, "Last Week Tonight with John Oliver," had an idea.

"He and I were talking about how we have so many conflicted feelings about the game, because of the political polarization happening with the Pats," Sandoe said. "Then we agreed we should do something and he was thinking about donating. We came up with the hashtag ... and just started tweeting about it."

Using #AGoodGame, Sandoe and Gondelman spread the word. It quickly gained momentum, with popular accounts, like Timothy Simons, who plays Jonah Ryan on "Veep," sharing their pledges.

"When [tweets] started coming in, it felt great because we thought, 'Oh, these are our friends who think this is great idea and are generous,'" Sandoe said. "Then all sorts of strangers started doing it, snowballing into something that really felt like a community and like everyone was getting involved."

Boston celebrated after the New England Patriots clinched Super Bowl LI. DEREK KOUYOUNIAN / METRO

"I certainly hope that more people realize that Boston is a very diverse place."

Emma Sandoe

Sandoe has since been trying to add up the impact. She and Gondelman asked those who participated to send them screenshots of their donations.

The tally reached more than $20,000 after just an hour of counting up receipts, she said.

"But I barely scratched the surface," Sandoe said. She's in the midst of making a spreadsheet with all the info.

Pats fans pledged to help a variety of organizations, including the ACLU, both its national office and Massachusetts chapter, The Center for American Islamic Relations, Planned Parenthood, the Southern Poverty Law Center and their local domestic violence shelters.

It wasn't all about money; fans pledged to volunteer their time or make calls to their representatives as well.

Before kickoff, Trump picked the Patriots to win — a move that sparked reservations for some fans and fears that he "jinxed" their team for others. Patriots tight end Martellus Bennett has already said that he won't visit the White House to celebrate his team's win with Trump.

Brady isn't the only Patriots friend of the president. Patriots owner Robert Kraft said he received weekly calls from Trump in the wake of his wife's death in 2011.

Trump watched the Super Bowl from the Trump International Golf Club in West Palm Beach, Florida, but reportedly bowed out early when the Pats were still behind. The team's epic rally began in the fourth quarter.

"Hopefully it's an apt metaphor for our country that even though President Trump left his own Super Bowl party in the third quarter, hundreds of people stuck with their team and their principles for what turned out to be both #AGoodGame and a legitimately good game," Gondelman said in an emailed statement.

NOT A TRUMP FAN

Patriots' Martellus Bennett will boycott the team trip to the White House

His team just won its fifth Super Bowl, but Martellus Bennett says he won't be participating in one planned celebration. And it involves President Donald Trump.

In a postgame interview following the New England Patriots' historic win against the Atlanta Falcons Sunday, Bennett told the Dallas Morning News that he will skip the team's planned visit to the White House.

Each year, the championship team from the four major sports gets a visit with the president. This time around, that would mean a visit with Trump.

"It is what it is. People know how I feel about it," Bennett said. "Just follow me on Twitter," referring to several tweets he has posted, criticizing the president and declaring support for Democrat Hillary Clinton.

Bennett won his first Super Bowl playing in his hometown for a team with strong ties to the president. In an interview ahead of Sunday's game, Trump called quarterback Tom Brady his "friend," and in October, Brady refused to discuss Trump's "locker-room talk" of grabbing women inappropriately.

Asked whether he's worried about Patriots owner Bob Kraft — another friend and supporter of the president — or Brady's reactions if he doesn't join the team at the White House, Bennett said he's not concerned.

"I'm not really worried about that, I'm not worried about it at all," he said. "You just don't bring that to work. We all have our beliefs. We accept people for who they are."

M. AQUILINA
@KimESTAqui

Sleep can be an elusive mistress. She doesn't mean to be cruel and, when you can catch her, she's pretty great to hang around, provided you can convince her to stay.

However, my whole life has been one giant swipe left at the hand of this siren of sleep. This promise of sweet surrender.

I am always and forever on the quest of slaying my dragon with a pill, an herb, a tea, a yoga pose and a whiny whimper, "I just want to sleep!"

Since I was a child, I've had the hardest time sleeping and an even more mountainous task of waking up on time. At night, the rest of the house would be quiet, aside for some Venetian blind-lifting snores from my dad. Yet, I was up reading or lip syncing to the local radio's Hot Nine at Nine.

Night-Time-is-the-Right-Time Kim was so inconsiderate to Next-Morning Kim.

GOOGLE COMMONS

I would hear the alarm clock and my mom yelling that I was going to be late for school, but I would fall back asleep and dream that, dressed in my school uniform, I was sitting at the kitchen table. By the time I heard my mom's voice again, my sleep-muffled mouth would tell her, "I'm eating oatmeal," when I was still indeed, the queen of Pillow Village.

After sleeping through five alarm clocks, a coffee maker and a pissed-off roommate in college, countless medical tests and assurances from my family doctor that I was too young to be so tired, a former supervisor at my first job as a grownup suggested I get a sleep study.

After more tests and two sleep studies, with multiple probes stuck to my limbs and scalp while medical professionals watched me sleep via a camera in the room, we figured it out.

Turns out, my sleepy time schedule is so backward, the head of the sleep center at Johns Hopkins University in Maryland said he sees only one person like me a year: Ten percent of the world's population are night owls.

In this series, we aim to figure out life's grandest mystery: Why the f— can't I sleep and how do I make myself just go to bed?

Jennifer Lopez posts cryptic Instagram note

Timing is everything. OK, that's not something I would normally say, but now that I've seen this on Jennifer Lopez's Instagram, I don't know, guys. I'm tempted to agree.

"Timing is everything. If it's meant to happen, it will, and for the right reasons," the post reads. What could this possibly mean?! Could it be a response to recent speculation about the pop star's definitely not fake relationship with Drake? According to Perez, Canada's finest rapper and

"Degrassi" alum was recently spotted getting close with a retired porn star in Amsterdam last week, which, OK. But what does it mean?! I suppose we'll just have to wait and see. In the meantime, I encourage Jennifer Lopez to keep posting really thirsty pics on Instagram because, honestly, she looks great.

Scarlett Johansson on whitewashing in 'Ghost in the Shell'

Listen, I mostly don't have anything against Scarlett Johansson. In fact, I like her. I long to have her throaty laugh and her deep, husky voice, and I almost get it right whenever I have the flu. But I have some concerns. The bombshell recently sat down with Marie Claire and talked about being the highest-grossing actress in Hollywood history, struggling for equality as a woman and smuggling her breast pump into the Oscars. Cool! But then she discussed the controversy surrounding her role in "Ghost in the Shell," a film that many critics agree is another instance of Hollywood's classic tendency to whitewash nonwhite characters. Sigh.

Whitewashing really isn't cute. And neither is her hedging the issue. "I certainly would never presume to play another race of a person," the "Avengers" actress said. "Diversity is important in Hollywood, and I would never want to feel like I was playing a character that was offensive." OK, but no. It's not about playing an offensive character. It's about giving opportunities to people of color instead of having a white woman play the Asian lead character in a film based on a manga. Of course, the issue is bigger than just Johansson — but still. At least it's a film with a definitive female lead, I'll give her that. So, yay?

Nicole Kidman to write explosive tell-all

Nicole Kidman is finally opening up. The 49-year-old is rumored to be working on a tell-all autobiography. And literally? My mouth is watering just thinking about all the goodies. According to Daily Mail, the "Lion" actress has maybe decided this is the time to lift the lid on her very guarded, very private life. And she could earn a cool $11 million for it, which isn't too shabby either. Surely, Kidman will dish on her experiences with ex-husband Tom Cruise and the Church of Scientology, which she has never really gone public about — because her two children with Cruise, Connor and Isabella, are devoted followers of the cult, er, I mean, church. Other likely dishy topics include her now husband, Keith Urban, and his struggle with drugs;

her maybe-torrid affairs with the likes of Ewan McGregor and Lenny Kravitz (girl, get it!); and maybe, hopefully, her decision to go blonde, even though we all know that the red hair looks so damn good on her. Don't fight it, Nicole!

Zayn Malik slams critics over anxiety

Zayn Malik has a message for all of his, um, haters. The singer and former One Direction boy bander took to Twitter over the weekend to remind everyone that he's here to stay. According to the Daily Mail, the singer has only sporadically appeared on stage, thanks to his struggle with anxiety, and was getting slack for it in the press.

"I recall someone saying to me a while back music wasn't my thing and maybe I should try something else," the 24-year-old tweeted after hearing the criticism. "I guess we're all good at doing things we shouldn't," he continued, with some festive emojis. I oscillate between being like, "Hey, why is this guy a thing," and, "This guy is mad talented, but I know way too much about his personal life considering I have never listened to any of his music." Regardless, anxiety is real. And illness should never get in the way of you pursuing your dreams. Anyone who says otherwise is ignorant AF, bye.

TINA CHADHA
@TinaatMetro
tina.chadha@metro.us

And you thought scoring "Hamilton" tickets was hard. Try getting your hands on one of the cool T-shirts or sweatshirts from the new collaboration between Jasmine Cephas Jones and Lou & Grey.

The actress, best known for playing the dual roles of Peggy Schuyler and Maria Reynolds in the Broadway phenomenon, teamed up with the retailer for a limited-edition line of chilled-out T-shirts, sweatshirts and necklaces that's pretty much sold out. (Act fast, you can still score some of the jewelry, which is crafted by the Brooklyn brand Widen.) The collaboration was a perfect fit. After all Cephas Jones, a busy rising star — she sung the national anthem at the Super Bowl with her fellow Schuyler sisters, and is starring on the final season of HBO's "Girls" — knows the importance of a good off-duty look. Each night she would immediately toss the huge bustles and corsets she wore during her almost-two-year run on "Hamilton" for "very comfortable clothing. The capsule — vintage inspired tops ($45-$75) and delicate necklaces ($185-$240) with phrases like "Brooklyn Original," "Love Will Conquer" and "Groove Baby" — showcase her casual cool style and Brooklyn roots.

How do you describe your personal style?

I just cut my hair, so I'm into a lot of cool hats. I'm really in love with my red beret. I wear it everywhere. I never leave my house without my black combat boots. I love a ripped jean with a turtleneck or a big button-up shirt. This all sounds super casual, but I love to dress up as well.

Whose style do you admire?

I love Sophia Loren. She's such a great actress that was always proud of her curves and showed that through her fashion.

Why did you choose phrases like "Love Will Conquer" and "Groove Baby" for the line?

After meeting with Lou & Grey, I went home and wrote down a huge list of words [like] "Groove Baby." It just means finding your individuality. "Love Will Conquer" came later. There's a lot going on in the world right now. We need so much love and positivity to keep us going.

Long life lingerie

Madewell, who prides itself on creating the always-so-perfect staples for your capsule wardrobe, has branched into intimates, launching online and in stores today. The simplistic but comfort-focused bralettes and undies are your trusty answer to that first layer of the day.

The collection features soft-to-the-touch natural fabrics — pillowy brushed cotton and lighter-than-air lace and mesh — and classic, comfortable cuts that are both modest and modern. The 42-piece line is designed to be both weekend and workweek-friendly, in muted beige, stripes and classic white or black. Bonus: Most pieces are priced between $12.50-$35, meaning they're made for wardrobe building.

We chat with designer Joyce Lee about the enduring popularity of the bralette and how they incorporated Madewell's DNA into the line.

With the rise of the bralette, what did you do to make sure Madewell's version was extra special?

We wanted to be sure that once a woman puts the bralettes from the collection on, she feels amazing. That meant that we needed to find the perfect fabric that had the right amount of softness, the perfect amount of stretch and recovery, and durability that could survive being worn under almost everything — and we hope, every day! We also looked to create simple and clean lines as well as subtle details to make sure the collection felt in line with our aesthetic and approach to dressing. Each fabric group has its own set of design elements that set them apart.

PROVIDED

We've seen the recurring trend of women reaching for underwear that is comfortable and practical. But now, do you see women reaching for sexier or more chic options again? We think there's a way to balance both — why can't it be comfortable, practical, simple, but still pretty and subtly sexy? That's what we hope is evoked from our line.

Are there any special fit details hidden within the pieces that you love?

The cotton group features convertible back straps and subtle stitching details. And we chose swan hooks and double-string straps for the lace group.

When it's cold outside, there's nothing like a hot breakfast to start your day. But a bowl of oatmeal can get boring real quick if you don't mix it up every now and then. Adding varieties of nuts, fruits and spices will pack in even more nutrition and freshen it up with new flavors.

Remember, oatmeal isn't the only breakfast grain in the field. Polenta, quinoa and bulgur can also add the proof to your porridge.

Here are four hot-cereal recipes — plus one for overnight oats — to make your winter mornings more nourishing.

Golden turmeric-flax breakfast polenta

Stephanie Clarke and Willow Jarosh of C&J Nutrition favor coarsely-ground cornmeal, (polenta) "because of its smooth, creamy texture and the fact that it's a whole grain, rich in nutrients like fiber and B vitamins."

They sprinkle theirs with flaxseed for omega-3s, turmeric and cinnamon for antioxidants and add sautéed apples for sweetness and extra fiber. Protein-rich crumbled walnuts keep you satiated. Get the recipe at cnutrition.com.

Jacked-up morning oats

Make your morning bowl go the extra mile by loading it up with good stuff. Instagrammer @veggininthecity makes hers with cashew milk, and then tops with bananas, hemp seeds, frozen berries and cinnamon.

Overnight oats

The set-it-and-forget-it breakfast you can throw together the night before and then wake up and eat, overnight oats will revolutionize your mornings. Make them by adding milk or water and fixings to oats, then cover and let sit in the refrigerator overnight. The Minimalist Baker prepares hers in a mason jar, mixing (gluten-free) rolled oats with almond milk, peanut butter, chia seeds and maple syrup, adding strawberries and bananas in the morning.

Slow-cooker oats

Essentially overnight oats that you can eat hot the next day, the Crock-Pot method is another breakfast oatmeal hack. You'll want to use steel-cut oats, also known as Irish oatmeal, and cook for seven to eight hours on low. Instagrammer @constancelyeating adds bulgur wheat, a mineral-rich plant-based grain, to bulk up the porridge even more. Vanilla, cinnamon and raisins sweeten it up; she tops with almonds, blueberries and chia seeds.

Breakfast quinoa bowl

Quinoa bowls: not just for sad desk lunches anymore. Food blogger Jeanine Donofrio of Love & Lemons prepares a cinnamon quinoa breakfast bowl: Simmer two parts almond milk and one part quinoa with whole cinnamon sticks, then top with coconut flakes, peaches, raspberries and almonds.

We fact-check health tips from Gwyneth, Snooki and Khloe Kardashian.

Gwyneth Paltrow: Put a jade egg in your vagina
The Goop founder and "Iron Man" actress interviewed the beauty guru Shiva Rose, who said that introducing a jade egg inside the female genitals helps to balance the hormonal cycle, harness energy and serve a function akin to doing Kegel exercises.

According to Rose, the ancient practice also helps to make women more attractive and improve your sex life, because Chinese concubines did it to impress the emperor.

"I don't know any study which could validate something like this," says Alvaro Monterrosa Castro, Colombia-based gynecologist and researcher at Cartagena University. "Placing a strange object inside the vaginal cavity is dangerous, because it could be infected with secretion and bacteria from the outside. Besides, all the infections could ascend to the uterine neck and cause a severe infection."

Snooki: Exfoliate your face with kitty litter

Reality television personality and professional wrestler Nicole Elizabeth "Snooki" LaValle told Conan O'Brien she used to exfoliate with kitty litter to save money during her "Jersey Shore" days. While it does contain silica, a regular component of certified beauty products, could this grimy DIY technique possibly work?

"Skip the kitty litter," advises Lina Maria Llanos, Colombia-based dermatologist. "This is a material that has zero processing and it is not designed to be used on skin. It is pretty hard and could cause erosions and wounds."

Khloe Kardashian: Wear trash bags to train and lose weight

The "Keeping up with the Kardashians" star said that she likes to train wearing trash bags to burn calories faster, while drinking plenty water to avoid dehydration from the sweating.

"You aren't burning fat when you are sweating," says Ricardo Castro, Colombia-based CEO and coach at We Are Crossfit. "This is a corporal reaction which your body uses to get cold, but not to burn fat."

EXPECT BRADY AND BELICHICK TO CALL IT QUITS AT THE SAME TIME

@dannypicard

If pacts are being created inside Gillette Stadium, I find it hard to believe that Tom Brady is not involved. Reports coming out of Houston the morning of Super Bowl LI confirmed my belief.

Several hours before kickoff on Sunday, NFL Network's Ian Rapoport cited sources that said the Patriots believe Brady will play three to five more years, and that the team will look to extend him next offseason.

Brady turns 40 in August. He's signed through the 2019 season, thanks to a two-year extension he signed prior to the 2016 season. If they try for something similar, then another two-year extension before the 2018 season would make sense. That would keep him in New England through 2021, and would give him four more seasons as the Patriots starting quarterback.

If the team and the player are on the same page — and it seems they are if you believe Rapoport's report — then it's no coincidence that Bill

Expect Bill Belichick and Tom Brady to walk out the door together. GETTY IMAGES

Belichick already knows when he'll be calling it quits.

During Super Bowl week, Patriots owner Robert Kraft told the Washington Post that they both know how much longer Belichick will coach the Patriots.

"He knows and I know," Kraft told the Post. "But he won't be done this year."

Kraft also said that he and Belichick have a "pact" that they don't talk about it.

My theory on this is simple. If they have a pact, and they both know when Belichick will step away, then Brady has to somehow be involved in that planning.

You don't just win five Super Bowls with the greatest quarterback of all time, leak that you'll look to extend him beyond 2019, and not plan your coaching future around that. So if Belichick knows when he's done, and if Kraft also knows when that is, then my theory is, it must have something to do with Brady's timetable. And by leaking both of these things last week, the Patriots are letting it be known that Jimmy Garoppolo is available in a trade this offseason.

All of this makes sense. Brady is still playing some of his best football, regardless of his age. Belichick would be a fool to choose right now to part ways with Brady. That wouldn't make any sense. And Belichick is no fool.

Also, for those who believe Belichick would like to take a few shots at a Super Bowl without Brady, perhaps you don't

Brady has his jersey 'stolen'

Tom Brady put his game-worn jersey from Super Bowl LI in a bag in the team locker room but when he later opened the bag, the jersey was gone. As of Monday afternoon, the jersey was still missing. The Brady jersey is valued around $500,000.

listen to him whenever he talks about how Brady's nonstop preparation keeps him on his toes as a head coach. That doesn't sound like something that annoys Belichick. I get the sense that he embraces it.

They all know that this magical run won't last forever. So they're planning to embrace it — together — for as long as they can. And if that's truly the case, then a pact with the coach must also include the quarterback.

Which is why I expect Belichick and Brady to call it quits at the same time.

Brady and Goodell finally cross paths

Much to the chagrin of most Patriots fans, Tom Brady did not bash NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell over the head with the Super Bowl MVP trophy Monday morning when Goodell awkwardly presented the award to the now five-time Super Bowl champ. Goodell and Brady posed for pictures briefly as they jointly held the trophy, and there was little more than small talk between the two.

"The two gentlemen that we have here [Brady and Bill Belichick] have set new bars across the league," Goodell said to the media before handing Brady the trophy. "Five Super Bowl championships and four MVPs for Tom Brady, cementing his legacy as not just a great Super Bowl performer but maybe one of the greatest players of all-time."

Goodell also sought out Brady immediately after the game Sunday night and shook his hand, congratulating him on an "awesome" performance. Brady was cordial with Goodell in both interactions, but the Patriots did get a few subtle digs in against the executioner of the Deflategate saga.

A Shields MRI commercial, in which Brady stars in, popped up online Monday morning. In it, Brady is told that he'll "need a bigger locker" now that he has five Super Bowl rings. Brady responds in the ad by saying, "Roger that."

Patriots owner Robert Kraft also indirectly slammed Goodell during his postgame speech on National TV in which he was given the Lombardi Trophy.

"Two years ago, we won our fourth Super Bowl down in Arizona and I told our fans that was the sweetest one of all," Kraft said. "But a lot has transpired over the last two years. And I don't think that needs any explanation. But I want to say to our fans, to our brilliant coaching staff, our amazing players who were so spectacular — this is unequivocally the sweetest." MATT BURKE

The anatomy of the Patriots' epic Super Bowl LI comeback win

The little things stacked up for the Pats late in Sunday's game.

@MetroBOS
sports@metro.us

Here's going to be the most forgotten aspect of the New England Patriots' epic comeback in Super Bowl LI:

Bill Belichick's decision to send Stephen Gostkowski out for a 33-yard field goal rather than make a desperate attempt at fourth-and-15, even considering the 28-9 deficit the Patriots faced against the Atlanta Falcons with less than 10 minutes remaining in the game. Desperate times call for measures much the same, and the Patriots were in just that scenario.

What good was the sure-thing considering the astronomical odds the Patriots were facing?

Well, everything, as it turns out.

It was 28-12 with 9:44 on the clock when the Falcons got the ball back on their own 27. They went three-and-out, on a drive highlighted by Patriots linebacker Dont'a Hightower's (pay the man his money) perfectly-timed sack of Falcons quarterback Matt Ryan. It caused a fumble on the Atlanta 25-yard line, recovered by Alan Branch. Falcons running back Tevin Coleman had gained 9 yards on the first two plays of the drive, leading to Atlanta's inexplicable decision to put the ball in Ryan's hands at third-and-one from the 36-yard line. But that's when the slightest sliver of hope began to spark within the hearts of Patriots fans.

Still, only 8:24 remaining with 16 points to make up? Nah.

Dwight Freeney sacked Patriots quarterback Tom Brady on the first play of the drive, digging the hole a little bit deeper. A loss of 5.

Then, the magic. Short pass to James White up the middle for 4 yards. Pass to rookie Malcolm Mitchell, who made a diving catch for a gain of 12. Pass to Danny Amendola for 8 yards, and again, firing to Amendola in the left corner of the end zone for the touchdown. Direct snap to James White completed the two-point conversion, and suddenly, it was a 28-20 game, but with only 5:56 on the clock.

Surely the Falcons, who ran all over the Pa-triot's defense in the first half, could chew up some clock by rushing with Coleman and Devonta Freeman (11 carries for 75 yards and a touchdown) in the backfield.

Nope.

Oh, things started fine for the Falcons, with Ryan completing a 39-yard pass to Freeman. But four plays later (which included a miraculous grab by Julio Jones), Patriots defensive end Trey Flowers sacked the quarterback again, leaving the Falcons looking at third-and-23 from the New England 35-yard line, hoping to get into field goal range and seal the Super Bowl win.

The Patriots used their first time-out. And less than a minute later, the Falcons were punting again thanks to a holding penalty that drove them further back.

Brady was incomplete on his first two attempts from the 9-yard line, with a little more than three minutes remaining. Then he found Chris Hogan for 16 yards, Mitchell for 11 more, and then the catch that will go down in Boston lore, Julian Edelman's juggling scoop of the ball just an inch from the carpet for a gain of 23 yards.

You hoped by then. You maybe even knew.
